Keynotes and Special Events

PLenary KEYnote: “25 Years and 486 Women Writers”
Thursday, June 22, 5:30pm, Hanes Art Auditorium 121, Hanes Art Center
Donelle Ruwe (Northern Arizona University) & Roxanne Eberle (University of Georgia)

The BWWA Mission Statement reads: “In an effort to encourage further scholarly efforts, including collaboration and discussion, this conference moves beyond strict literary boundaries and includes presentations on women’s political, legal, medical, religious, and scientific writing. Our goal is to truly expand the canon, which in part means redefining ‘literature.’ We support an atmosphere of genuine inquiry and interaction between conference participants, which has previously included graduate students and established scholars alike.”

In this plenary conversation, we provide a retrospective account of the British Women Writers Conference from its founding twenty-five years ago, beginning with anecdotes from the early days of the conference to today. In what ways have we fulfilled the vision set forth in 1992? We discuss who we are as a community of scholars, the authors we have recovered, and our impact on academia at large. After exploring the unique features of the BWWC in comparison with other academic conferences, we’ll conclude with a consideration of future directions for our field and the conference itself.

Friday, June 23, 2017, 5:30pm, Hill Ballroom, Carolina Inn
Andrew Stauffer (University of Virginia)

In this talk, I want to lead you down the garden path, towards a consideration of pressed botanicals in books of poems and their relationship to Anglo-American verse of the nineteenth century – as written, as published, and as read. We are all aware of the pervasive involvement of poetry with botanical material, particularly in this era of Forget-Me-Not anthologies, post-Romantic nature poetry, Rossetti’s “Woodspurge” with its “cup of three,” and the hothouse aesthetics of decadence a la the Fleurs of Baudelaire.

Drawing on examples discovered via the Book Traces project (http://booktraces.org), I argue that flowers made their way into books of poems in complex and revealing ways. Poets like Felicia Hemans and Jean Ingelow wrote knowing that floral, botanical practices were part of the field of reception; publishers and illustrators designed books that called them forth and echoed them; and readers engaged in this layered scene of reception as they meaningfully inserted blossoms and buds between the leaves. I hope to make the case for the value of these individual copies and the histories of female readerships they contain, particularly in our current moment of print collections management and the downsizing of libraries.

Lecture & Performance: “The Song Cycles of Charlotte Smith’s Beachy Head”
Saturday, June 24, 1:30PM, James and Susan Moeser Auditorium, Hill Hall
Lecture by Elizabeth Dolan (Lehigh University)
Performance by Amanda Jacobs (composer & piano) & Shelley Waite (mezzo-soprano)

Elizabeth Dolan has been working with composer Amanda Jacobs to set Smith’s Beachy Head for piano and mezzo soprano. Together they identified twenty-six songs in five cycles, which Amanda has set beautifully to music, accompanied by singer Shelley Waite. In July 2014, Dolan and Jacobs premiered twelve of the twenty-six songs at the Romantic Studies Association of Australasia Annual Conference. They presented a lecture recital as the culminating event of the conference. Since then they have also presented it as a stand-alone recital at Lehigh University and as a panel at the 2016 NASSR conference. At this year’s BWWC, Jacobs and Waite will present all twenty-six songs for the very first time. The performance consists of an introductory lecture of fifteen minutes and an hour of music.
This plenary invites scholars at all stages of their career—from Ph.D. students to tenured faculty—to join us in a no-holds-barred brainstorming session centered around supporting non-tenure-track professionals who are becoming the norm rather than the exception in our changing job market. This session intends to identify and work toward concrete changes in support of non-TT scholars. Together, our panelists and participants will map institutional challenges and then imagine the kinds of support one needs in this changing landscape to build and maintain a scholarly identity. We will ask what counts as “scholarship” as well as how the category might be reimagined to make visible a larger terrain of work. What kinds of resources do scholars need that non-TT jobs typically don’t provide, and how can organizations such as the BWWA, MLA, Digital Commons, and academic journals leverage their power to help facilitate access? How can teaching become more firmly cemented as a form of scholarship, especially as academic jobs become more teaching-heavy? And how can we lead rather than follow the changes reshaping our field and our profession by embracing new opportunities and cross-curriculum partnerships?

Workshop: “A Conversation about Best Practices for Supporting Transgender Folks in Higher Education & Beyond”

Saturday, June 24, 3:15PM, Incubator, Hyde Hall

Lisa Hager (University of Wisconsin, Waukesha)

A central part of the ethos of the BWWA has always been its feminist politics—both in the scholarship on women writers it supports and its commitment to the work and professionalization of graduate students. If we want to continue to build on this legacy, we must make the BWWA’s feminist politics a truly trans-inclusive feminist politics. Consequently, as we celebrate the BWWA’s twenty-fifth anniversary, it is our responsibility to acknowledge and witness the violence, be it legal, physical, or social, that has been done to transgender and gender non-forming North Carolinians as a result of HB2 and its recent problematic “repeal.” We must also use this conference as a space to educate ourselves so that we can support the lives and activism of transgender and gender non-conforming people in our workplaces and communities. The goal of this session is to begin a thoughtful and ongoing conversation about and foster activism around issues of gender identity and sexuality in the BWWA, our home institutions, our communities, and our families.

Keynote: “Collaborative Energies, Women Writers, and an Unpublished Manuscript on Elizabeth Barrett Browning’s Honeymoon”

Saturday, June 24, 5:15PM, Hanes Art Auditorium 121, Hanes Art Center

Beverly Taylor (University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill) & Marjorie Stone (Dalhousie University)

Our talk explores collaborative energies at play in generational shifts among women writers, in our own co-authored scholarship on Elizabeth Barrett Browning, and in the psychic conflicts the poet negotiated as she entered into conjugal relations with fellow poet Robert Browning. As our primary example of EBB’s intense and often competitive relation with earlier women writers, we focus on the generative energy in her poems that engage with Felicia Hemans. Adapting specific settings and situations from Hemans’s works, EBB produces more complex woman-centered poems. In the second half of our paper we draw on archival research to discuss an unpublished and tantalizing fragment that presents relations of a differing kind. EBB begins a poem about the Brownings’ honeymoon visit to Petrarch’s fabled fountain at Vaucluse, drawing on an experience she repeatedly described in her letters, although not in the personal, metaphoric, and eroticized manner she employed in the fragment. Situating this manuscript in scholarship on Victorian honeymoons and our speculations about EBB’s conflicted emotional reactions to beginning married life, we present the fragment as an example of the creative energies her new conjugal relations activated, as well as a glimpse into honeymoon intimacies in a period when they often remained unrecorded.
In keeping with the theme of this year’s British Women Writers Conference, the Louis Round Wilson Special Collections Library will host a special exhibition of rare materials that seek to capture women as generators of literature and as members of a writerly community across generations. The exhibition showcases women’s authorship in diverse print forms and literary genres, and speaks to various other roles of women in eighteenth- and nineteenth-century as they engage with texts: roles as readers and critics of literature, as correspondents, and as biographers of other women, real and fictional.

Beginning with a collection of Aphra Behn’s poetry from 1684, the display traverses more than two centuries toward Virginia Woolf, who famously identified Behn as the grandmother of professional women writers. In between, the exhibition boasts first editions of texts like Charlotte Lennox’s Female Quixote (1752), Jane Austen’s Mansfield Park (1814), and Christina Rossetti’s Goblin Market (1862) alongside unique items, such as a manuscript letter by Maria Edgeworth and a heavily annotated presentation copy of Sara Coleridge’s Phantasmion (1837). Other volumes demonstrate women’s participation in alternative publishing mediums, such as Cheap Repository Tracts, pocket editions, and illustrated gift books. Moreover, a poetry volume and a broadside print demonstrate Phillis Wheatley’s transcontinental work in multiple formats. Finally, the exhibition includes iconic texts that reimagine women’s future and past lives. Wollstonecraft’s Vindication (1792) shares the table with Mary Cowden Clarke’s and Virginia Woolf’s fictional biographies of women actors and authors, speaking to British women’s interest in recording their own history of authorship.
Art Exhibit: “Women’s Views, Women on View”

Women’s Views, Women on View: A Self-Guided Tour of the Ackland Art Museum

Steering Committee member Elizabeth Shand has put together a virtual tour of the Ackland Art Museum to accompany the conference. We would like to invite all conference attendees to visit these pieces in person during their stay in Chapel Hill. The Ackland is just a few steps from the Carolina Inn and is open from 10am to 5pm on Wednesdays through Saturdays, and from 1pm to 5pm on Sundays. Admission is free.

On view at the Ackland is an impressive selection of over 260 works from its permanent collection. Five galleries showcase The Western Tradition, from art of the Ancient Mediterranean world to twentieth-century European and American art. The Museum’s significant holdings of Asian art are presented in two galleries: Color Across Asia and Court and Capital: Art from Asia’s Greatest Cities. A gallery of art from West Africa completes the current exhibitions. Please visit the Ackland’s homepage, http://ackland.org, for more information. This exhibit can also be found online, at https://bwwc17.web.unc.edu/self-guided-tour-of-the-ackland-art-museum/.

Madame de Villeneuve-Flayosc, 1789

by Jean-Louis Le Barbier Le Jeune, French, 1743–c.1797

oil on canvas

The sitter is Mélanie de Forbin-Gardanne (1759–1841), who in 1788 married Alexandre de Villeneuve, the marquis de Flayosc, and then became known as Madame (or Marquise) de Villeneuve-Flayosc. The artist’s wife, Victoire-Julie de Villeneuve-Flayosc, was the sitter’s sister-in-law. Madame de Villeneuve-Flayosc most likely had this portrait painted as a souvenir for her 1789 trip to Rome, part of a Grand Tour. The Marquise’s lavish, fashionable clothing and surroundings demonstrate her wealth. The stylus in her right hand, her books, and her drawing papers demonstrate her learning and artistic ability.

This painting inspired a short story by Alan Gurganus, written in 2010, and a short play by Daniel Wallace that was performed at the Ackland in 2012.

The Falls at Tivoli with the Temple of the Sibyl, c. 1815

by Pierre-Athanase Chauvin, French, 1774–1832

oil on canvas

Between 1809 and 1814, under the French occupation of Rome, the city began a systematic excavation and restoration of its Classical ruins. This sparked an increase in demand for paintings of the ruins. Chauvin, who was living in Rome, likely sketched this scene in person and then combined the sketches in his studio to create a finished composition. In his 1856 guide to French Artists Abroad, Louis Dussieux compared Chauvin to the famous seventeenth-century landscape painter Claude Lorrain: “Mr. Chauvin, by the sweetness of his color, rendered in the freshness of the morning or in the heat of the sun, by the charm of its lines and the air we breathe in front of his paintings, has taken a lot from Claude Lorrain ... Personally, I believe, has made more of him ...”
Art Exhibit: “Women’s Views, Women on View”

Falls of Tivoli, 1807
by Robert Freebairn. British, 1764–1808
oil on canvas

Freebairn studied the famous site of Tivoli—with its ancient temples, Renaissance villas, and striking natural scenery—while he lived in Italy, but he painted this version after he returned to Britain. In 1806, Freebairn published a collection of prints entitled Six Select Views in Italy; the sixth print is described as the “Subterraneous Entrance into Maecenas’ Villa” situated in the Vicinity of Tivoli, suggesting the kind of scenery depicted in this painting. Tivoli’s architecture and landscapes were especially popular with artists; the Ackland’s collection includes at least seventeen prints, drawings, paintings, and photographs of Tivoli.

Italy, 1859
by Elisabeth Jerichau-Baumann, German, born in Poland, died in Denmark, 1819–1881, oil on canvas

The red inscription on the left of the canvas indicates that Baumann made the painting in Rome during the period of struggle for Italy’s unification and independence from Austria. Baumann painted a number of political works; commentators both praised her powerful subject-matter and noted what they called her “un-feminine style.” An 1860 review of this painting noted that it showed “such power of drawing and colouring as have rarely been manifested by a female painter.” Layers of darkened varnish obscured parts of the painting when the Ackland acquired it, including the writing on the prison wall in the upper left. A conservation treatment now allows viewers to see the Italian word Libertà (Liberty), a crucial element of the painting’s meaning.

Young Girl with a Mandolin, c.1843–45
by François Millet. French, 1814–1875
oil on canvas

The young girl in the painting may be a singer of romantic songs. If so, the other figures might be members of her troupe. During the time this painting was made, Millet made many such works depicting imaginative fantasy subjects characterized by sensuous brushwork and this type of color palette. The style relates to Millet’s admiration, at this point in his career, for eighteenth-century artists like François Boucher and Antoine Watteau, who had fallen out of favor after the French Revolution of 1789. In the first half of the nineteenth century, however, their work became attractive to patrons and collectors who saw it as a symbol of wealth and status.
Art Exhibit: “Women’s Views, Women on View”

At the Window, 1869
by John Everett Millais, British, 1829–1896
oil on canvas

Millais was a child prodigy and the youngest student ever to enter the Royal Academy. He was also the first ever native British artist to be given a hereditary title—the Baronet of Palace Gate, Kensington, in the county of Middlesex and St. Ouen, Jersey in the Channel Islands. Millais normally spent his holidays in Scotland, and beginning in 1870 he painted a series of large autumn and winter landscapes inspired by Scottish scenery. The view in the background here may depict one of these locations.

Spanish Dance, c.1885, cast 1921
by Edgar Degas, French, 1834–1917
bronze

Degas made wax and mixed media statuettes of dancers as a way of studying their movement, often applying soft wax over a cork frame. When he died, there were more than 150 wax sculptures and fragments in his studio; seventy-four of these were later cast into multiple bronze versions. Spanish Dance was one of three wax sculptures that Degas had cast in plaster between 1900 and 1903, although the Ackland’s was cast later, after the artist’s death. During his career, Degas exhibited only one sculpture—Little Dancer, Aged Fourteen. It was on view for less than one month and then remained in the artist’s apartment until his death thirty-six years later. Art dealer Ambroise Vollard recalls the artist’s hesitation to show his sculptures or have them cast in bronze: “It’s a tremendous responsibility to leave anything behind in bronze—this medium is for eternity.”

Promenade Matinale: Her Majesty the Queen Empress (Queen Victoria), June 17, 1897
by Jean Baptiste Guth, French, active 1883–1921
color lithograph

In 1897, Queen Victoria, who at the time was also called Empress of India, celebrated the sixtieth year of her reign—her Diamond Jubilee. The date of this print is five days before the official celebrations took place. Guth made portraits of many notable Europeans, often for Vanity Fair magazine, including Czar Nicholas II of Russia and Gustave Eiffel, the designer of the Eiffel Tower in Paris. Some of Guth’s portraits—though certainly not this one—were caricatures.
