Special Events

On View April 2-June 2, 2018 (HRC Display Cases, 2nd Floor, HRC):
Celebrating Mary Shelley: The 200th Anniversary of Frankenstein (An Exhibit)
Curated by Diana Silveira Leite and Jana Zevnik, Graduate Research Associates

Not only inspired by the 26th Annual British Women Writers Conference 2018: New Directions, this Harry Ransom Center Reading and Viewing Room Case Exhibit is also in honor of the great author and her greatest work. Frankenstein was published anonymously in 1818 to great acclaim and controversy, while speaking to the scientific community of the time. Mary Shelley (1797-1851) and her masterpiece have inspired countless artists in literature and the visual arts. This exhibit showcases both her early achievement in science fiction and her legacy as an influential literary figure drawing from such collections as the Percy Bysshe Shelley Collection, the Robert De Niro Papers and the HRC’s Book Collection.

On View April 10-22, 2018 (PCL Library Scholars Commons, PCL 2.400):
“New Frontiers: Women Writers and the British Raj” (An Exhibit)
Curated by Mariah Wahl and Cody Jarman, Graduate Students
Facilitated by Gina Bastone, Humanities Librarian for English Literature & Women’s and Gender Studies

Inspired by the 2018 British Women Writers Conference’s invitation to reconsider the work of individuals living at the margins of traditional understandings of nationality and profession, this exhibit highlights the relationship between women writers and British rule in India in the late nineteenth and twentieth century. Where India offered an escape from the orthodoxy of Britain to some, colonial anxieties regarding racial superiority also trapped many women into acting as guardians of traditional British values. At the same time, British rule eroded many Indian cultural practices, including its strict patriarchal order. This led to new educational and professional opportunities for Indian women even as it imported new patriarchal and racial ideologies and left them struggling to articulate new identities. Through a mixture of poetry, fiction, scientific, and personal writing, “New Frontiers” speculates on the complex mixture of freedom and disenfranchisement imposed on both British and Indian women writers by the contradictions of Empire.

Thursday, April 12, 10:00am-1:00pm (2nd Floor, Denius Room, HRC):
“False Starts, Fragments, Drafts, and New Directions: British Women Writers in the Ransom Center’s Collections”
A Showcase of British Women Writers for BWWC 2018 (A Display of Materials)
Curated by Elizabeth Garver, Ransom Center Research Associate III
Assistants: Grace Gibson and Diana Silveira Leite, Graduate Research Associates
Guest curator: Jim Kuhn, Associate Director for Library Division, Hobby Foundation Librarian

Meet reference archivists from the Harry Ransom Center, and learn more about manuscript and book collections relevant to the researchers of British Eighteenth- and Nineteenth-Century women writers.

Thursday, April 12, 12:30pm-1:00pm (2nd Floor, Denius Room, HRC):
Harry Ransom Center Presentation of Materials
Facilitated by Elizabeth Garver, Ransom Center Research Associate III
Assistants: Grace Gibson and Diana Silveira Leite, Graduate Research Associates
Guest curator: Jim Kuhn, Associate Director for Library Division, Hobby Foundation Librarian

The Display of Materials will close with a thirty-minute presentation (inclusive of Q&A) by the curators. They will be happy to explain the narrative of their exhibit as well as field questions about the materials and turn pages for interested scholars.
Friday, April 13, 6:30-8:00pm (Prothro Theater, HRC):

Staged Reading: Mary Cowden Clarke’s “Rosalind and Celia: The Friends”

Students from the UT English Department’s Shakespeare at Winedale program (Walden Hagelman, Cassidy Schulze, and Austin Hanna) will perform a staged reading of excerpts from Mary Cowden Clarke’s “Rosalind and Celia: The Friends,” one of the novellas from her mid-nineteenth-century collection The Girlhood of Shakespeare’s Heroines. The performance will also incorporate material from Shakespeare’s As You Like It, Cowden Clarke’s source for the tale, and will conclude with some discussion of the importance of nineteenth-century British women writers on Shakespeare.

Keynotes

Jill Galvan is Associate Professor of English at the Ohio State University and the author of The Sympathetic Medium: Feminine Channeling, the Occult, and Communication Technologies, 1859-1919 (Cornell, 2010). Her past research has focused on long nineteenth-century British media technologies, spiritualism, mesmerism, and psychical research and both Victorian and contemporary ideas of the posthuman. She is currently researching representations of marriage. Her latest monograph project argues that late Victorian and early twentieth-century stories of marriages coevolved with literary realism. She is also co-editor, with Elsie Michie, of a forthcoming essay collection, Re-plotting Marriage in Nineteenth-Century British Literature (OSU Press) that reexamines the cultural and formal elements of marriage stories.

Keynote: “Garden, Space, Interiority: Marriage and Modern Character.”

Susan S. Lanser is Professor Emerita of Comparative Literature, English, and WGS at Brandeis University. Her most recent books are The Sexuality of History: Modernity and the Sapphic, 1565-1830 (Chicago, 2014), which won the AHA’s Joan Kelly Prize and honorable mention for the ASECS Gottschalk Prize; Narrative Theory Unbound: Queer and Feminist Interventions (OSU Press, 2015), coedited with Robyn Warhol, which received honorable mention for the Narrative Society’s Perkins Prize; and Fictions of Authority: Women Writers and Narrative Voice, (1992), soon to be reissued by Cornell. She is president of the American Society for Eighteenth-Century Studies.

Keynote: “Narrative Justice: Gender, Race, and Rescue in the Age of Austen.”

Parama Roy is Professor of English at the University of California, Davis. Her past research has focused on postcolonial theory and literatures, Victorian literature, taste and dietetics, and the nonhuman turn. She is the author of Indian Traffic: Identities in Question in Colonial and Postcolonial India (California, 1998) and Alimentary Tracts: Appetites, Aversions, and the Postcolonial (Duke, 2010), and co-editor of States of Trauma: Gender and Violence in South Asia (Delhi: Zubaan, 2009). Her current book project, tentatively titled “Empire’s Nonhumans,” seeks to understand the degree to which the nonhuman–whether animal, vegetal, telluric, extra-terrestrial, monstrous, or spectral–is key to a comprehensive grasp of the imperial world, whether in terms of its imaginative circuits, its political formations, or its bodily registers.

Keynote: “Of Deities, Animals, and the Colonial State.”

The TCU English graduate program has particular strengths in the study of British women writers. The department sponsors ABO: Interactive Journal of Women in the Arts 1660-1830, co-edited by Mona Narain, which focuses on gender and women’s issues, and all aspects of women in the arts in the long 18th century (graduate students in the department have varied opportunities to work with the journal). Anne Frey brings strength to Romanticism studies and Karen Steele to Irish literature and culture. Past recipients of the BWWA Award for Contributions to 18th- and 19th-Century British Women writers include faculty member Linda K. Hughes, and past Ph.D. recipients include Wendy Williams, author of George Eliot, Poetess (2014).
